About the Khmer Harvest Build

For the past two years, Habitat for Humanity has been helping transform the lives of families who used to live and work on a stinking municipal dumpsite in Phnom Penh, capital of Cambodia. A new community has been created 40 kilometers away in Oudong. Dozens of Habitat homes have already been built.

Over five days this November (15th-19th), hundreds of foreign and local volunteers will work alongside Habitat partner families to build 22 more homes ... plus a community hall. Volunteers will do more than build. They will have a chance to work on a cooperative farm for a day and spend another day making environmentally-friendly bricks, both potential sources of livelihood for the families who will be resettled.

Donate and your support for Habitat for Humanity Cambodia's Khmer Harvest Build will help lift people out of poverty. You will also have a chance to join in a lucky draw that could see you working alongside volunteers from around the world and experience the color, culture and cuisine of Cambodia, one of Southeast Asia's most fascinating countries.

* includes all in-country volunteer costs and fees, excludes some air fare costs to and from Cambodia. See Important Small Print.
