Habitat for Humanity in Paraguay

Habitat for Humanity has worked in Paraguay since 1998, providing support to more than 5,000 families in the challenge of achieving better housing conditions. For more information, visit: www.habitat.org.py

The housing need in Paraguay

According to the National Department of Housing, it is estimated that 1.1 million houses are required in Paraguay, and that number is increasing. An estimated 43 out of every 100 families live in inadequate housing conditions, according to the Inter-American Development Bank.

The figures show that the deficits are primarily qualitative, both in urban and rural areas. Demand for housing improvement is an important part of the qualitative deficit (73 percent); the rest is demand for expansion or demand for expansion with improvements. The figures also show that of the total of homes that require improvements, 58 percent have sanitation problems.

The lack of official information on the deficit is vital; likewise, it is known that progressive construction is the main manner in which most Paraguayan families have access to a home.

Habitat's contribution in Paraguay

Throughout its history, Habitat for Humanity Paraguay has implemented actions that transform the housing conditions of families and vulnerable communities, mobilizing resources and promoting solidarity and responsibility.

Our programs

Housing solutions

Habitat Paraguay partners with families who, despite having a place to live, suffer from problems such as water filtrations, overcrowding, bad electrical connections, and no sanitation.

Technical assistance for repairs, renovations and expansions, as well as access to the project "Together for Your Home", is offered for those applying for new housing construction.

Events

During the year, we promote flash constructions to raise awareness and mobilize volunteers. We encourage the participation of families, businesses, suppliers and volunteers who enjoy helping others and understand the need for adequate housing.

Volunteerism

Each year, six or seven international groups are mobilized through Habitat's Global Village volunteer program, along with 10 to 12 national groups that help in the construction of housing solutions. In communities, volunteer committees coordinate briefings in their neighborhoods. In addition, administrative volunteers also work in the offices for short periods of time.

Services to access a home

We promote the work of local leaders, in towns, neighborhood committees, schools, churches, businesses, NGOs, etc., to advocate for decent housing and reach families who need new homes or improve the conditions of those who already have one.

Meet a Habitat family

Ana Acosta and her family lived in a shack built with logs and plastic bags. They did not have a safe place they could call home. "When it rained we covered ourselves with bags and had to run to the kitchen or the bathroom," she said. This situation was the worst scenario for one of her children who suffers from asthma. Today, thanks to Habitat Paraguay's support, they are living in a home with two bedrooms, a kitchen and a bathroom. It's what the family needed to improve their quality of life. "My children now get sick less often and enjoy having a modern bathroom and even want to shower several times a day," said Ana.
