Habitat for Humanity in Poland

Habitat for Humanity Poland has been operating since 1992. It was the first Habitat branch in Europe. We operate in Warsaw and Gliwice and so far we have helped over 1,300 families in Poland.

The housing need in Poland

There is a serious housing shortage with Poland having the lowest rate in Europe of number of homes for its population (1000:360), according to the national statistics. The deficit of housing units is between 600,000 and 1.5 million. Approximately 15 percent of the population lives in poverty housing, defined as a lack of roof overhead and/or living under substandard conditions (with no bathrooms and toilets, no central heating or technically unsafe buildings), and 44.8 percent of Poles are living in overcrowded conditions while the EU average stands at 17 percent (HFH Poland Housing Report 2015). The severe housing deprivation rate is high at 10.1 compared to 5.2 EU average (Housing Europe 2015). Poland ranks in the bottom third of OECD countries in terms of housing conditions for children (average rooms per child and children in homes that lack basic facilities). The average waiting period for social housing in Poland in large cities is between 2-7 years, and in smaller cities up to 20 years.

How Habitat addresses the need in Poland

Habitat for Humanity activities in Poland range from building new affordable houses, renovating condominium blocks and advocacy initiatives. Renovation projects have been completed throughout the country in partnership with homeowners' associations and they involve both local and international volunteers as well as beneficiaries in their building work. Habitat Poland's advocacy initiatives focus on achieving system changes within government policy that will benefit the most vulnerable. Currently Habitat Poland is advocating for legislative changes to increase access to housing for people most in need with a focus on social rental housing. They are also working to raise public awareness and mobilize the general public around the housing issue in Poland and pushing key debates such as fuel poverty, housing poverty and housing first into social and political spheres.

Emergency Renovations for Individual Families

The program is focusing on the needs of individual families who live in poor housing conditions in the Warsaw area and the South-West of Poland. Habitat Poland provides technical assistance for home improvement works, along with non-profit loans and volunteer labour. To date, the program has benefitted 54 families, including nine families in Warsaw through the partnership with Procter & Gamble who donated 50% of renovation costs. The rest was contributed by the beneficiaries and held in Habitat's revolving fund to assist future families.

'Trampoline' project - a new model of supported housing for young adults leaving foster care

There are approximately 80,000 young people who live in foster care in Poland. When they turn 18, they have to leave foster care despite not being adequately prepared for independent life. No housing assistance is currently offered and, as a result, many end up in homeless shelters. The 'Trampoline' project involves the development of seven apartments in unused attic space, which will be rented to young people at a low and affordable rate for up to 3 years. This will support their transition from foster care to autonomous living.

'Housing Cooperatives' pilot project

Habitat Poland is creating a solution for families with poor credit rating through a housing cooperative initiative. In the pilot project, Habitat Poland is supporting a cooperative consisting of 7 families who collaborate in order to build a multi-family building. The families' combined savings, as well as a mortgage which Habitat Poland will help obtain by offering short-term collateral, will serve to buy a plot of land on the outskirts of Warsaw. Habitat Poland will then guide the families through the construction process and lower the cost of construction works by engaging volunteers.

In addition to housing, beneficiaries will be provided with finance and energy efficiency training, as well as some assistance with first employment opportunities. The project offers a model solution addressing the time gap between young people's departure from foster care institutions and the time they can access social housing. The future beneficiaries contribute to the renovation works at the attic alongside international volunteers and local corporate volunteers, which has proven to be very rewarding for all involved.

Meet a Habitat family

Agnieszka, Andrzej and their three children (Angelika, 17; Adam, 12; and Laura, 5) moved to a social flat in November 2014, after many years of waiting. Even though the municipal authorities have covered the costs of replacing old windows and electrical repairs, the apartment's floor, walls, and central heating had to be also repaired. Andrzej managed to replace the leaking central heating pipes. Agnieszka and Andrzej have also renovated the apartment's living room and kitchen. However, further work was delayed due to insufficient funds. As a result, the family only uses 1 room in the apartment. HFH Poland helped with completing the renovation. The other two rooms were repaired, in addition to the bathroom, which also required urgent intervention. The entire family worked alongside HFH and the volunteers, helping with works on the flooring.
