Habitat for Humanity in Romania

In 1996, Romania became Habitat for Humanity's 50th country worldwide. In Romania, Habitat for Humanity's mission to provide safe and decent housing has for years been pursued through the national organization and several affiliates. The affiliates are spread across the three historic provinces of the country, with the national office in Bucharest.

The housing need in Romania

In Romania, more than 2 million children (51 percent) are living in poverty. 8.5 million people (41.2 percent of the Romanian population) have no bath or shower or access to running water. According to the national statistics, 35 percent of the housing stock in Romania is in a state of complete neglect and needs repairs. Real wages for working Romanian families have dropped by about 40 percent, putting additional pressure on the strained social system. The unemployed, farmers and housewives are the social categories most affected by severe poverty. Two-thirds of Romania's poor live in rural areas. In the cities, many dwellers live in cramped apartments in condominium complexes. Much of Romania's housing stock is low quality and deteriorating because of a lack of maintenance. A family of eight is more likely to live in a two-room flat than in a house. More than 10,000 blocks of flats were constructed 40-50 years ago and now need serious renovation to their infrastructure, heating systems and roofs. In recent years, Romania has faced several bad floods, leaving thousands of people in temporary shelters every year. Similarly, the country has experienced harsh winters with heavy snowfalls that isolated many villages from the main roads and stable food supplies.

How Habitat addresses the need in Romania

Habitat for Humanity Romania builds, rehabilitates, provides advice, supports and conducts energy efficiency and disaster risk reduction and response programs for vulnerable groups. The organization runs nation-wide and regional campaigns to raise funds for its construction projects and works closely with a large number of companies who actively support charitable projects.

Energy efficiency housing

Habitat for Humanity Romania helps families all over the country to save on energy costs by insulating houses and doing minor repairs that minimize heat losses. In addition to this, over 3,000 people have taken part in trainings on practical tips for energy efficiency. Habitat for Humanity Romania also built the first passive community center in Romania in Boldesti – Scăieni. The building is a wooden structure with straw-bale walls and natural plasters (clay and sand for interiors and classic plasters for a better resistance). The building has increased efficiency in water and electricity consumption.

Construction and rehabilitation of homes and apartment blocks

Habitat Romania builds and renovates homes in partnership with low-income families throughout the country. This ranges from one-house builds to blitz builds of 10 or more houses in just one week. Rehabilitation work is aimed at improving living conditions for families in the communist-era apartment blocks. Many of these projects support socially disadvantaged groups: Roma, orphans and families who care for members or children with special needs.

Disaster response

Thousands of families are left without houses following natural disasters: floods, earthquakes, fire and landslides. Over the years, Habitat for Humanity Romania has helped more than 40,000 people through its disaster risk reduction and response programs. Wherever possible, Habitat for Humanity Romania has rehabilitated homes destroyed by water, but often has had to rebuild them entirely. These programs are community based and carried out in partnership with national government and local governments and businesses.

Meet a Habitat family

Cristina is a three-year-old girl from Bacău country and this year she will spend the first Christmas at HOME.

For 18 years, Cristina's mother and father lived in social housing provided by the government and were in danger of eviction when they applied for a new house with Habitat. Cristina's family is one of eight that have received a new house through the Big Build 2015 project – an annual event during which Habitat for Humanity Romania builds multiple houses in only 5 days.
