Dear President Obama,

I join Habitat for Humanity in asking you to make a smart investment in the promise of affordable, secure housing for vulnerable American families. As the economic crisis worsens, more and more families looking for the financing to buy a home will be left out in the cold.

Right now, amidst the worst economic crisis in decades, affordable homeownership programs are ever more vital. These programs are just the safety nets families need to help keep them off the streets.

I know that you care about this issue, but I also know budgetary strains mean government may cut back on certain programs.

I'm asking that you please make sure affordable homeownership programs continue for American families who need them most.

Please act now to ensure that more, not fewer, American families have a chance at safe, decent and affordable housing.

I appreciate your leadership on this important issue.
