Habitat for Humanity in Côte d’Ivoire

Established in 1999, Habitat for Humanity Côte d’Ivoire seeks to break the cycle of poverty by working with homeowners to provide safe, dry and secure homes, with decent sanitation.

The housing need in Côte d’Ivoire

Among the world’s largest producers and exporters of coffee and palm oil, Côte d’Ivoire once boasted the strongest economy in West Africa. Now, due to a devastating civil war and global economic pressure in 2002, the country contends with extreme poverty, and its exhausted infrastructure struggles to meet the growing needs of the people. In the city of Abidjan alone, the housing deficit is estimated to be 20,000 houses per year. Urbanization is adding to the problem, with almost half of the growing population now living in towns or cities. The cumulative deficit is estimated between 400,000 and 600,000 units in 2016. Also, the annual deficit is estimated from 40,000 to 50,000 units per year. In rural areas, the need is also immense. Many people live in temporary structures, which require extensive upkeep and repair and are vulnerable to fire. Walls are typically made of mud in a wooden frame and often crack, causing leaks and eventually falling apart. Thatch-roof houses harbor numerous disease-carrying insects, such as malarial mosquitoes and the tsetse fly, which can spread eye disease. With so many people living in poverty, substandard housing is an overwhelming challenge. Most families live in traditional homes made of mud walls and thatch roofs or inadequately constructed brick houses. Overcrowding exists in the majority of these houses, and lack of natural light and ventilation are common problems, causing illness and other problems.

How Habitat addresses the need in Côte d’Ivoire

Habitat Côte d’Ivoire builds houses using appropriate technology and local building materials. The houses are made of brick and mortar, with corrugated iron roofing sheets. The designs are simple and spacious and cater to the individual families’ needs, while remaining affordable for the homeowners. Houses consist of either two or three bedrooms and a hall. Smaller houses are currently planned, in order to reach families on the lowest income groups.

Meet a Habitat family

N’GUSSAN Affoué lives in Troumambo, a small village located in the Central region of Côte d’Ivoire. She is a housewife and mother of five children. The village only has one water point, installed 20 years ago. When the pump is broken, like many families in the community, N’Guessan has to walk 3 km to get unsanitary water from the river Bandama. When the government installed the old pump, there was no water point committee set up. This situation meant that when the water pump broke, nobody knew what to do.

When Habitat started the rehabilitation of the broken water pump, it was one of the most beautiful days in N’Guessan’s life. She decided to be a member of the water pump committee. Her role is to ensure good hygiene practices and safety of the water pump. She is pleased to participate. “With the water points rehabilitated, my children can go to school. The conditions of life of the population of Troumambo, mostly children have been improved”, she said.
