Cost of Home Policy Platform

Cost of Home Policy Platform – Looking forward

As we work toward our ambitious but attainable goal, the Cost of Home campaign is serving as a critical tool to address the far-reaching fallout of the COVID-19 pandemic and the disparate impact it is having on communities or color.

Before COVID-19, more than 18 million U.S. households were spending half or more of their income on housing. With the significant economic impacts of the pandemic continuing to unfold, the number of families struggling to make ends meet is only growing. Further exposed by COVID-19 is the inequity in communities already suffering as a result of systemic racism that has all too often played out in housing policy.

Habitat is committed, through Cost of Home, to strengthening our efforts to be part of the solution to end racial inequalities in our nation by helping to make the cost of home something we all can afford. In the coming months, you will see – with advice from the Cost of Home campaign cabinet, the Public Policy Solutions Task Force, various other network affinity groups, and across Habitat for Humanity International – adjustments to the Cost of Home Policy Platform and our Federal Policy Agenda to ensure the campaign can be the most effective tool possible in both recovery from the COVID-19 pandemic and advancing racial equality in housing.

We made great progress in the first year of the campaign and, with the help of our network and collaborators, we can ensure that families – no matter who they are, where they live or how much they earn – have access to a stable, affordable, place to call home.

Goal: 10 million people with increased home affordability, including substantial increases in low-income homeownership opportunities, through policy and system changes at the local, state and national levels

Families all across the United States are paying too high a price to cover the cost of home. Rent and homeownership costs are skyrocketing, while wages are not keeping pace. Far too often, families struggle to make ends meet. Everywhere you look — cities, suburbs, rural areas — the stability that home should bring remains out of reach for far too many families.

At Habitat for Humanity, we know that a family should never have to spend more than 30 percent of their income on a home. But consider that today more than 18 million U.S. households pay half or more of their income on a place to live. That is unacceptable.

To improve housing affordability broadly, policymakers from the local, state and federal levels need to support comprehensive packages that address the increasing cost of housing across the rental and homeownership spectrum to meet the needs of low-income individuals and families nationwide. Advocates and policymakers must acknowledge and address the well-documented historic patterns of racial discrimination in housing and land use policies — at all levels of government — that still impact the makeup and opportunities of our communities. We strive to create a healthy housing market and affordable opportunities in every community in the United States.
There is no silver bullet to solving the nation's home affordability challenge, but the following platform focuses attention on the core subthemes and underlying policy issues that the Cost of Home campaign explains are critical to helping families achieve home affordability. The Cost of Home campaign will increase this affordability by addressing and changing policies and systems focused on:

1. Supply and preservation
2. Access to credit
3. Land use
4. Communities of opportunity

We acknowledge that the factors related to affordability — supply, credit, land and communities — are interconnected and that policies that address challenges related to affordability can, and often do, impact multiple elements and dynamics of the need for home affordability solutions.

While Habitat affiliates, Habitat state support organizations and Habitat for Humanity International focus on specific policy issues within this platform, the Habitat network will support priority public policy initiatives with these key principles in mind:

- The level of impact on overall housing affordability and ability to meet the housing needs of lower-income people.
- Whether the needed expertise is available to analyze and determine the justification for the policy issue.
- Whether the policy is bipartisan, with the goal of garnering support from both sides of the political aisle.
- The viability of successfully moving forward in the legislative process.
- The level of support from partners and/or coalitions.

Increasing the overall supply and preservation of affordable homes

Almost every area in the U.S. faces a shortage of safe, decent and affordable homes, particularly homes available to those earning modest incomes. The Cost of Home campaign will support advocacy for policies that increase the production, preservation and accessibility of homes that are affordable for lower-income households.

Expand affordable home production.

Strengthen, expand and develop successful local, state and federal programs that fund and stimulate new development and address the ongoing operational costs of affordable housing.

Increase access to existing housing stock.

Strengthen, grow and enforce local, state and federal programs that ensure that households are able to affordably access decent and safe housing opportunities on the open market, regardless of income.

Preserve existing affordable homes.

Create and increase funding resources used in the preservation of existing homes, including programs that support the rehabilitation and repair of homes to make them safe, decent and affordable.

Equitably increasing access to credit

Credit is difficult, if not impossible, for many households to access, and minority and lower-income applicants often do not have access to credit at all or have access only to predatory credit. The Cost of Home campaign will support advocacy for policies that increase and broaden access to safe and sound credit for underserved populations, including policies that address the homeownership gap for communities of color.

Strengthen housing finance systems.

Work to strengthen federal and state housing finance systems that encourage participation of private capital and ensure broad, reliable and equitable access to single-family and multifamily financing, including financial support for the production and preservation of affordable housing.

Update credit scoring and underwriting standards.
Responsibly update the credit scoring system and overly restrictive underwriting standards to broadly serve homeownership-ready borrowers.

Promote fair lending and consumer protections.
Support housing and consumer lending policies that protect consumers from discriminatory practices and high-cost, predatory loan products that put housing security and access to safe credit at risk.

Ensure that financial institutions help meet the credit needs of borrowers in all segments of their communities, especially underserved markets.

Expand asset development and housing counseling.
Support innovative asset development and savings programs that put homeownership within reach for lower-income families.

Support and increase the investment in housing counseling and financial education programs.

Expand funding for down-payment assistance programs.

Support tax policies that increase the accessibility and affordability of homeownership for lower-income households.

Optimizing land use for affordable homes

Land is often among the greatest costs encountered in developing homes, whether for rental or for ownership. The Cost of Home campaign will support advocacy for policies related to land acquisition, use, and development to bring down the cost of building and otherwise stimulate the production and preservation of affordable housing, promote fair housing, and fully reflect community needs.

Reduce land and development costs.
Streamline discretionary land use approvals to reduce the time, risk and cost of building affordable homes.

Reduce or waive impact fees and extractions related to the development of affordable housing.

Promote policies that facilitate the acquisition and preservation of land for affordable housing, including land banking, use of publicly owned land and other strategies.

Create incentives or requirements for affordable housing.
Pursue the thoughtful reform of land use policies that advantage the development of affordable housing and end exclusionary zoning practices.

Promote inclusionary policies and zoning that ensure broad and equitable access to homes that are affordable to households of all incomes.

Ensure long-term equity, affordability and asset building in land use.
Promote strategies to ensure that housing remains affordable over time, including fostering shared-equity and other permanent affordability strategies.

Support policies to ensure that families are able to build financial equity through affordable homeownership opportunities.
Support regulatory and public policy efforts that strengthen fair housing policies and enforcement in land use and development.

Ensuring access to and development of communities of opportunity

At Habitat, we know that home isn't just a building; it includes the community and resources in which you live, work and grow. Affordable homes must be built in environmentally sound areas with access to economic and social opportunities and viable transportation. Moreover, as communities experience increasingly new development and investment, they need systems in place to preserve affordability and prevent the displacement of current residents, many of whom have lower incomes. Independent of location, homes must be well-constructed and mitigated against disasters to control the health, maintenance, sustainability and energy costs of the home. The campaign will support advocacy for policies that protect and strengthen neighborhoods and enable communities to thrive.

Promote renter and homeowner housing stability.

Support policies that promote stability for homeowners through property tax relief programs to ensure that families are able to remain in their communities as new investment arrives.

Reform and support rental housing policies that strengthen and protect renter households to ensure that families can afford to live in communities that have the resources needed for success.

Support policies that strengthen tenure security.

Improve the quality of the existing housing stock.

Support and expand resources for programs that provide opportunities to repair homes to increase energy efficiency, mitigate against disasters, and address health contaminants.

Increase resources for programs that fund home modifications and repairs that allow homeowners to age in place.

Promote and strengthen code enforcement policies that address neighborhood housing conditions to ensure that residential properties are maintained safely.

Support healthy and economically integrated neighborhoods.

Promote policies at all levels of government to address historic practices of government and social discrimination in our communities, including supporting fair housing as it relates to neighborhoods and the adoption of racial equity frameworks.

Support local decision-making processes to ensure that residents have a meaningful voice in the community development and planning decisions affecting their neighborhoods, and promote targeted infrastructure investments in distressed communities.

Combat sources of income discrimination and expand resources that allow families to access affordable homes in neighborhoods with access to jobs, education, transportation and health care opportunities.

Boost the economic mobility of families through workforce development programs and individual development accounts.
Special thanks to the Public Policy Solutions Task Force for their ongoing support of the development of this policy platform

A Public Policy Solutions Task Force has been created to support, advise and guide the development of policy priorities and positions of the Cost of Home campaign at all levels of government. The task force will identify federal affordable housing policy priorities, guide the development of the federal policy agenda for the campaign, and identify and define state and local policy priorities for the four subthemes of the campaign.
