Getting started

Congratulations on joining a Global Village team! You play a vital role in our mission to put God's love into action by bringing people together to build homes, communities and hope. We want to thank you again for using your time, energy and resources towards eradicating poverty housing conditions. Together, we are creating a world where families and communities have safe, affordable and decent places to live.

This handbook is a comprehensive guide to the many ways Global Village participants have successfully spread awareness about Habitat for Humanity's efforts and raised hundreds of thousands of dollars to support our shared mission.

In addition to this handbook, we offer fundraising coaching conference calls. Details on conference call topics can be found online at habitat.org/gv/resources.aspx. The fundraising coaching conference calls are designed to provide more specific information on the topics covered in the handbook, as well as answer your questions and give you new and creative ideas for reaching your fundraising goal.

Build a better world: Join the GV Challenge!

The GV Challenge is our response to the growing global need for decent, safe and affordable shelter. More than 1.6 billion of the world’s citizens do not have an adequate place to live. Habitat is challenging Global Village volunteers to make an even greater impact on the global issue of poverty housing by raising additional funds above individual program costs to support Habitat’s building projects worldwide. Take up the challenge! Join us in sharing our story, building hope and making an impact on the world.

You are much more than a fundraiser!

Remember that while you are raising funds for your GV trip, you will be talking to people who might not know much about our mission. You are a spokesperson for Habitat. Your investment in your GV trip puts you in a unique position to advocate for our mission and share your passion with others.

“Everybody can be great ... because anybody can serve. You don’t have to have a college degree to serve. You don’t have to make your subject and verb agree to serve. You only need to have a heart full of grace. A soul generated by love.”

As much as we wish otherwise, we alone cannot ensure housing for all simply by building or rehabbing more Habitat houses. That’s why advocacy is a natural extension of the Habitat mission and supplements our home-building efforts. We want to get as many other people and entities involved as we possibly can.

Certainly the experiences you have on your Global Village trip will make you uniquely qualified to describe Habitat’s work to others. But you can fill the role of advocate even before your trip. Even if you are able to fund your entire program cost, travel expenses and more, we encourage you to invite your community to support your trip. You don’t just have to ask for money — you can also ask for prayers, in-kind gifts, emotional support and more.

Whether you raise significant funds or not, our ultimate goal is that you engage as many people as possible in caring about your journey and your passion for eliminating poverty housing.

Our ability to truly further our mission rests on our volunteers becoming vocal advocates around the world. Often, it is the countries where the Global Village program sends volunteers that most need these advocates. The more you share your story, the more impact you will ultimately have on this enormous global need.

Many people are nervous about the idea of fundraising; some are downright intimidated by the thought of asking others for money. So how do you begin to set a goal?

Global Village trips offer opportunities for our volunteers to try new things, stepping outside of their comfort zones and transforming their own lives while serving others. Stepping into your fear and discomfort is where the most learning and growth will happen. Set a GV Challenge goal that stretches you, but doesn’t paralyze you. Set a goal that you aren’t quite sure how you will achieve, but doesn’t feel so enormous that it feels impossible. Give yourself the space to amaze yourself!

Participants sometimes set fundraising goals based on the cost of a house or of a rehab/repair project in the region they are visiting. This cost varies by country and region. Ask your team leader to get this information if you don’t already have it. We have had participants set individual goals as high as building 20 additional houses, and as small as $100. The more funds you raise, the more Habitat can do. And remember, the more people you ask, even if they say no, the more people know about our mission.

Another way to set a goal is to fill out the Assessing Your Network worksheet on page 8. Consider who you know and how much they could give you if asked in the right way. On page 10 is a list of ways that people fundraise. You can get as creative as your mind allows. Think about whom you will ask for support and how you will ask them, and then create a goal that feels right for you and your unique network.

Many teams have established team goals. You can use this team goal as a guideline. How much of the team goal do you want to try to raise funds for? Some participants have even vowed to match the team by raising the entire amount themselves, and then having the team double it.

We recommend a minimum GV Challenge goal of $500 per person over and above the program cost. For people who are new to Habitat and new to fundraising, we have found that this goal is surprisingly achievable and yet a big enough stretch that newer participants have to make an effort to reach it. People who are veterans of the program have seen what a small amount of money does in regions that so desperately need our support. We recommend a minimum goal of $1,000 over the cost of the program for our past participants and for our ambitious new participants.
Those who have strong social networks, access to corporate matching gifts, fundraising experience or other fundraising resources are encouraged to try to personally raise the funds to build at least one additional home or fund a rehab/repair project (or even as many as 20!).

Tonight, 1.6 billion people in the world will sleep on the streets or in unsafe and unsanitary conditions. No matter how much you raise, every extra dollar goes directly into service for the families and communities that most need us.

In the words of George Bernard Shaw, “The reasonable (person) adapts herself to the world; the unreasonable one persists in trying to change the world. Therefore all progress depends on the unreasonable person.” So whatever goal you set, remember, 1.6 billion people are counting on us. Be unreasonable!

“Often, when I am on a speaking trip, someone will speak to me with a word of advice. It goes something like this, ‘Millard, I am a strong supporter of Habitat for Humanity, but you send out too many letters asking for money.’ My reply is always the same, ‘We’ve tried asking and not asking. We always get more when we ask!’”

— “Building Materials for Life, Volume II,” by Millard Fuller, founder of Habitat for Humanity
Assessing your network: who to ask

The first priority in fundraising for your goal is who to ask

Start by soliciting the people you know well. That inner circle will most likely be eager to support your efforts. Then move on to casual acquaintances, work or school associates, church members, local companies and civic organizations. The truth is, many people you ask will support you. People will donate simply because you are asking!

Professional fundraisers put people into categories when they think about how to raise large amounts of money. These are the ones that you might come across:

High donors and family foundations
For trip-based fundraising, a high donor is typically defined as someone who can give at least $1,000. These are people who you want to ask in person whenever possible.

Corporate, church, civic organization donors or sponsors
Many local businesses like to sponsor people in their community who are doing exciting charitable work. Which businesses do you have relationships with, or where are you a frequent customer? Also, many large corporations have a matching gift program that matches donations given by their employees. Be sure to ask all of your donors if they have access to corporate matching programs that can double their gift.

Small donors
Most successful fundraising campaigns are built upon a foundation of small donors who give in increments of $10, $25 or $100. If you ask enough people, you can quickly raise significant amounts of money, $10 at a time.

Donor bridges
Sometimes you know someone who knows someone. You might have a friend, for example, who, when you ask for help says: “I know a donor who has a foundation and who would give a big gift to this cause.” The person who is willing to introduce you is called a bridge. You want to treat bridges as if they are donors.
Assessing Your Network: How much to ask for?

Creating a list of whom you want to ask and how much you think they could give you is a great place to start.

To raise money, it is important to break down your overall goal into smaller, more attainable steps. So the first step is to see what you are comfortable asking for. For example, which of the ways to raise $5,000 seems most comfortable for you?

Five ways to slice it
1. 5 people who give you $1,000
2. 10 people who give you $500
3. 20 people who give you $250
4. 50 people who give you $100
5. 200 people who give you $25

Find the amount you feel most comfortable asking for. Is it $25, $100, $500 or $1,000? Take time to reflect on what amount you feel comfortable with.

While you might be comfortable asking for $25, the reality is you might not know 200 people. In reality, you will be asking for some gifts at the $25 level and some at a higher level. You now understand where your comfort zone is for asking, but we also encourage you to stretch yourself to ask for higher amounts.

A network chart is a resource to break down your goal so it feels achievable to you. The chart is made up of gifts in different ranges. Usually one in every three to five people you ask will give you a gift. When you ask for smaller amounts, you often have to ask fewer people. Determining your network list will help you to determine which ways are best for you to raise money.

Fundraising strategies: how to ask

There are many ways to... Here are the common activities — but certainly not the only ones — that people use to do trip-based fundraising:

Online giving (page 15)
Giving through Facebook or via email is more popular than ever. Our new web platform, Share.Habitat, allows you to set a fundraising goal, track your progress and send out email appeal letters to your online network with the click of a button.

Snail mail appeal letter (page 15)
Some of our most successful fundraisers do it the old-fashioned way — they write an appeal letter, print it, sign it, mail it to their friends and family, and include a self-addressed, stamped return envelope so people can easily respond.

In person/phone (page 16)
Asking for a larger gift should be done in person whenever possible. You always have a better chance of getting a donation when you ask this way.

Events (page 19)
A popular way to raise money is to host events such as benefit dinner parties where the food is paid for or is subsidized, and participants donate money to attend. If you or a friend teaches a class, host a benefit class to raise funds for your GV Challenge goal.

Athletic event sponsorships (page 20)
Some people run a marathon or participate in other athletic events to solicit friends, family and coworkers to sponsor them on behalf of Global Village.

Selling stuff for a profit (page 22)
Cleaning out your attic and garage and having a benefit garage sale, or designing and selling T-shirts, or other items, can generate a significant amount toward your GV Challenge goal.
Crafting your message

There are a lot of ways to develop your fundraising message. These methods have been successful, but these are just to get you started. We encourage you to create an even more compelling message and share it with us so we can update this handbook with your success story! For sample text for some of these messages, see Appendix 2.

Sponsor me
Create an average donation-per-day sponsorship. If your goal is $5,000, and your build project is 10 days, look for people to sponsor you for a day at $500 per day, or a morning or afternoon for $250.

Sponsor a house
Find out how much it costs to build a house in the region you are visiting. In some countries, an additional house costs as little as $2,000 to build, while in others it could cost $25,000 and more. Set a goal based on how many additional houses you want to build, and craft your message around that goal. You can also ask your team leader to get information on how much a window, door, roof, foundation, etc., costs and break down the gift requests that way.

Sponsor my team
For teams that are working together on a GV Challenge goal, you might share the larger total your team hopes to raise and what that amount of money will provide to the region. So instead of explaining that you are trying to raise enough for a door, your team might be striving to raise enough for two additional houses. Your message could include your individual and your team goal.

Virtual team
If your team is using a virtual team strategy, coordinate with your team members to determine what benefits your virtual team will get, how team members will support you, and how much they need to give to be considered a member of the virtual team.
You can also use this approach individually and create your own support team that prays for you, sends you encouraging messages while you are on the trip and provides extra funding for more building capacity in the region. In exchange, you would provide daily email updates, photos and acknowledgement of your team so they can live vicariously through your experience. (Make sure you have consistent Internet access during the build project. Internet access might be limited in many host program locations.)

Alternative gifts
The alternative gift appeal letter asks for financial support in lieu of material gifts that traditionally would accompany a special occasion such as a birthday, Christmas, a wedding, anniversary, graduation, etc.

Pledge to pray
After you ask for a financial donation, you can also ask for prayers. Ask people to commit to think of you and pray for you in their own way every day that you are in the field. Create a prayer team for you and your team, and be sure to update the team when you are leaving on your trip and as often as you can from the field. Their prayers can make a difference for your team! Don’t forget to update them when you get back about how their prayers helped your team do its work.

Birthday appeal
One veteran volunteer and Global Village team member felt that turning 60 was a birthday that deserved extra attention, so she decided to go global by joining a GV team to Hungary. She asked friends and family, and anyone willing to listen, to donate rather than give her a birthday gift. Because it was her 60th, she asked for contributions of $6 to $600 or any amount, as long as it included a six. Many donors who might otherwise have written checks for $10 donated $16. Lots of people wrote checks for $60; a few made them out for $60.60, or $66. All told, nearly 50 donors — individuals, couples and families — participated in this very successful and satisfying alternative birthday celebration.
Writing your appeal letter

An inspiring, clear and compelling letter is at the heart of a successful letter-writing campaign. Great appeal letters always tell a personal story and express the need that you are filling by raising funds and participating in a Habitat build. Here are the elements of a great letter:

- Details about your team’s project, including where and when.
- If possible, a personal note to the potential donor (“Hi Bob, Happy anniversary to you and Marybeth. Hope you are doing great.”).
- Why you are participating in a Global Village trip. Be positive and poignant!
- Inspiring story about the need for the project.
- If your audience is not familiar with Habitat, some background information.
- A clear request for donations/financial support and your overall fundraising goal.
- A date by which you want their support.
- Link/url for your Share.Habitat page.
- Instructions on how to donate via check.
- If via snail mail, include a self-addressed, stamped envelope.
- How to reach you with any questions.
- Get to the point. Tell your story in one to two pages, maximum.
- Try to send at least two to three months before you leave.
- One month before your trip, plan to send a reminder. A lot of people receive written appeals and mean to give, but then forget about it. Plan to give supporters and potential supporters another update on the project, your preparations for your journey and how much you still are trying to raise. For those who haven’t given yet, ask again.

Creative appeal

Some people like to write funny or unusual letters to catch the attention of the donor. For example, we’ve seen people turn their appeal letter into a quiz, or a creative list of “Top 10 Reasons I am Building a House Halfway Around the World.” Be creative, and if it suits you, be funny!
Sample Letter (more samples included in Appendix II)

Dear Pancho,

I hope you are doing well after the big move. I look forward to hearing about how life is in New York. What a big change from Texas!

I am writing because in two months, I will embark on a trip to Guatemala with Habitat for Humanity’s Global Village program. I was chosen as a member of a Global Village team that will be building a home with a family in Sololá, a Mayan community of 80,000 people.

As I’ve started to learn more about the need in Guatemala, I have become even more passionate about this opportunity. Eighty percent of Guatemalans live in poverty and nearly 1.2 million Guatemalan families lack a decent place to live. Children are growing up in poorly constructed houses made of corrugated metal sheets, wood planks or palm tree branches. Some families crowd into one room, where multiple families live together. Because it is nearly impossible for even moderate-income people to get a loan in Guatemala, many families who have benefitted from Habitat’s work say it is the only way they could even dream of building and owning a home.

Habitat for Humanity Guatemala has been in existence since 1979 and has served more than 35,000 Guatemalan families in need of safe, affordable and decent shelter, but who lack access to any kind of financing for their home. As you might know, Habitat for Humanity is a trusted global leader in eliminating poverty-housing conditions and strengthening community health and resilience worldwide. Habitat doesn’t just give away homes — it offers low- or no-interest, affordable and fair loans to families that also put in significant sweat equity during the homebuilding process.

The part that astounds me is how easy it is to address this housing crisis. It costs less than $5,000 to build a simple but decent, earthquake-proof home in Guatemala. With that relatively small amount of money, the life trajectory of an entire family (and probably future generations, too) will be improved dramatically.

My personal goal is to raise the entire cost of one home that will change a family’s life forever! Together, my Global Village team hopes to raise $25,000, enough to build five houses.

Today I am asking you to help me reach my $5,000 goal. Any amount will make an enormous difference, but if everyone who receives this letter gives $100, we will be able to build not just one, but two houses! (Feel free to give more than $100, too!) My deadline is Dec. 1.

Please donate via credit card on my fundraising Web page at Share.Habitat.org/xxx/xxxx (this is the best way to give) or via check made out to Habitat for Humanity. Please send checks to me at 510 Tulsa Ave, Denton TX 76201. I will bundle the checks, label them to make sure they get allocated properly and mail them on Dec. 1.

I’ll send you an update next month on the project and on my fundraising success! Of course, feel free to call (760-555-1313) or email me at david@gmail.com if you have questions about this journey and about Habitat’s work worldwide. Thank you again for considering this request and for supporting this important effort.

Sincerely,

David
Online giving

People who use online fundraising tools raise between 40 percent to 50 percent more than people who don’t use online fundraising strategies. Also, online donations typically bring in double the amount of money given versus donations made via check.

Think about your social networks, your email address book and even the various email lists you are on. Who would be interested in the opportunity to support your Global Village project? If possible, send a personal email with a personal note at the beginning before the content of the appeal letter.

We are also proud to offer Habitat for Humanity’s web platform, Share.Habitat, which streamlines and simplifies your efforts to fundraise via email, Facebook, LinkedIn and other social networking sites. Your Share.Habitat page is a great resource for sharing photos, stories and measuring your fundraising progress. It also allows you to send a letter to your entire social network with a click of a button.

Giving via Share.Habitat has other benefits. Donors who give on Share.Habitat will receive an automatic thank-you letter, plus the donation will instantly be counted toward your fundraising goal. This automated process also saves postage and time in processing.

For information on how to easily create your personal Share.Habitat fundraising Web page, see Appendix 1.

Snail mail
Not everyone is a fan of email, and some of our participants have had great success the old-fashioned way: printing their appeal letter, signing it and enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope for the donor to return a check to them. Compelling evidence shows when the return envelope is already stamped, people are more likely to give than if they have to find their own stamp.

Make sure your letter includes your Share.Habitat url or the online giving address at habitat.org/cd/giving/one/donate.aspx?link=2 for which the donor will need your GV event code and participant number. You can also provide a number (800-422-4828, ext.7530) for donors who want to give by phone.

When you mail checks back to us, please make sure you include your name, GV event code and participant number to ensure the checks can accurately be credited toward your goal. Note that it takes up to three to five business days to update your fundraising total and to manually process the checks once we receive them. Bundle your checks and mail them to Global Village Program, PO Box 369, Americus, GA 31709-0369.

Email with restraint
In this age of do-not-call lists and Internet spam, it is important that participants exhibit a degree of restraint. In compliance with Habitat for Humanity International’s policy when fundraising via the Internet, avoid sending cold call and blanket email solicitations to strangers and e-lists of people you do not know. It is acceptable, however, to participate in chaperoning, in which someone you know prefaces your solicitation with an endorsement and sends it to people they know.

Video appeal
Some of our more ambitious GV participants create fundraising videos with photos of the host program and other houses that have been built by Habitat teams, as well as a pitch about why the viewer should support them and the Global Village program. These are great to share on your Share.Habitat page and link to them via email.
“I am only one person, and I cannot do everything. But just because I cannot do everything, does not mean that I will refuse to do that which I can.”

— Helen Keller

Fundraising cards
Print small fliers or cards with your Share.Habitat address and a short sentence about what you are doing and your fundraising goal. Distribute them at work, school, church or at a holiday dinner.

An in-person fundraising ask is the single best way to raise the most money. It is 10 times more effective than snail mail and five times more effective than a phone call. Try to ask in person when you are asking a group (such as your church or a local civic club), when you are asking a company or business for sponsorship, or when you are asking for what you would consider a larger gift (for some people this is $500; for others this is $5,000).

Most people are initially uncomfortable with an in-person request for money. The best way to mitigate that fear and discomfort is to prepare and practice!

To prepare:
- Learn everything you can about Habitat’s mission, vision, the Global Village program, and the region you will visit.
- Be able to speak about your personal interest in or passion for the mission of eradicating poverty housing around the world. If you are doing a presentation, include photos of the region and other Habitat build projects, if possible.
- Be clear about what you are asking for. It should be a concrete step that can be answered yes or no, such as a specific dollar amount, sponsorship of a benefit event, allowing you to do a presentation about Habitat at their company, etc.
- Gather background on the potential donor. Who are they and do you have a sense of what or how much you should ask for? What else do they give to? What are their passions? What other resources do they have that you need?
- Practice your pitch. You can role-play it with a friend or family member. And be prepared for some unexpected donations from friends and family members with whom you practice your pitch. If you are inspired, they will be, too.

Once you have prepared, you should understand the mechanics of how an in-person fundraising meeting works.
Outline

Before the meeting
Before you schedule the meeting, prepare the donor that you will be asking for something. Potential donors do not like to be surprised by solicitations that they were not expecting. On the phone it is as simple as, "Hi, Bill. I think you might be interested in supporting the Habitat for Humanity project I’m participating in and I’d like to meet with you to tell you more about it.”

The meeting
- Introduction. Tell the person that you appreciate them for making time for the visit.
- Small talk. Be friendly, but also respect the donor’s time.
- Explain why you are coming to them. If the donor has a connection to Habitat, mention that connection and acknowledge them for their work/commitment to the mission. If not, why do you think they could be interested? It could be an interest in poverty housing issues, an interest in the region you are visiting or an interest in supporting your leadership development and your passions. Think about what will resonate most for them.
- Build your case. Include the need for Habitat’s work in the place you will visit and stories of Habitat’s impact and why that inspires you. How are you helping to support the mission and why does this move you?
- Explain how they can help and how their help will make a difference.
- Ask for a specific dollar amount or range, or other specific support if you are not asking for money.
- Be quiet. Let the donor absorb the information presented.
- Thank the donor for their time, regardless of whether they said yes or no.
- If they said yes, try to collect a check before you leave. If that isn’t possible, give the donor instructions on how to give online or via the phone.
- If the donor needs time to think it over, set a clear time to follow up.
- Follow up with any additional material you promised.
- After the meeting, assess what worked and what did not.
- Within 48 hours, send a personal thank-you note to the person for their time and consideration — or a note thanking them for their gift.
Other tips for asking in person

- Try to be attentive, thoughtful, responsive and respectful of the needs of the donor. Do not interrupt or disagree/argue with the donor, even if they express objections.

- Be prepared for questions and objections. Imagine the issues the donor might raise and be prepared to answer them.

- When asking, make sure you ask a specific question. Saying, “I hope you will consider giving to Habitat” is not an effective ask. Saying, “Would you be willing to give $500?” is an effective ask.

- If the donor is not receptive to the request, gently find out why. Is it the timing? Is the project not a match for them? Is the amount of the request too high?

- Bring a card with instructions on how they can donate online, via phone or by sending a check. If possible, collect a check during the meeting.

Telephone

Telephone asks have similar elements to meetings and require the same preparation. They are typically shorter and more to the point. They do not provide as good results as in person, but are a very valuable strategy for asking people you know.

- Tell them why you are calling. What is their connection to you, Habitat’s mission, the country? Why would they be interested?

- Build your case. Explain why you joined a GV team and what is most exciting or inspiring to you about the journey. What is the need in the country? How will their donation directly support a family that could not otherwise afford decent shelter?

- Make a specific ask and then be quiet and let the donor respond.

- If the person is interested in contributing, ask how they would prefer to donate and then provide instructions on how to do that.

- Thank them for their time and consideration.

- If they make a gift, be sure to follow up with a personal thank-you note.
Event-based fundraising

Direct solicitation via email, snail mail, in person and phone are good ways to ask family and friends for financial support. However, fundraising events allow you to go far beyond that inner circle and expose your trip and Habitat for Humanity to a larger, more diverse audience. And they can be fun!

General tips for events

- Events can be as simple or elaborate as you want them to be. The first couple times you do fundraising events, try to err on the side of simplicity. People will be happy to support you and don’t need a complicated plan with a lot of details to be able to offer their support.

- Always create a goal. How much do you want to raise at the event? Make sure people know what the goal is.

- Have a sign-in sheet and collect as much contact information as you can. Use this information to follow up, and thank people for coming and for their support. You might also use this list to send updates from the field and do fundraising after the trip if you are inspired.

- If appropriate, offer a short presentation about the project. Show a GV video, create a slideshow, and speak from the heart about why you have chosen to invest your own time and money into this effort.

- Ask for support. You could do a formal pitch or ask people to support through a silent auction or other means.

- Manage the logistics of collecting the donations. It is important to be prepared to collect the donations you are requesting. Have envelopes available for people to put checks into. Have enough pens for everyone. Be sure to have one or two people on hand to collect donations at the door and/or during the event.

- Always have your fundraising Web page info available on a card that you can hand out with clear instructions on how to donate online or via phone and check.
Be creative with the theme. If possible, tie it to your project by having food, decorations or entertainment from the region you will visit or create a home-building theme where the goal of the party is to raise enough to build a house.

Some successful event ideas

Dinners
Host a dinner party at your house and ask for a minimum contribution from the guests. Do a short presentation between courses. You could serve food from the region you will visit and see if local shops that carry that type of food can donate items, such as desserts or drinks.

Get a restaurant to sponsor or partially sponsor you, and charge a donation at the door for a buffet or fixed menu. Some people like to host these events at restaurants that serve the cuisine from the country you will visit.

Drinks
A popular and successful way to raise money is to gather people at a restaurant or café, where you charge a donation at the door. Ask if the venue will offer you free drink tickets or a discount at the bar. We’ve seen people include silent auctions as part of these events to raise even more money.

Concerts
If you know musicians or other performers (or if you are one), you could create and produce a benefit performance. Or attach yourself to a music event or other performance that is already scheduled. Ask if a band you know would be willing to collect donations at the door or by passing a hat, and allow you to speak on stage in between sets.

Parties
Host a party at your house or at a venue that you can use for free. Charge a donation at the door. If you are ambitious, have a silent or live auction as part of the activities.

Bring new meaning to the term house party. Create a party where the theme is build a house and set a goal to build at least one house for a family in need with the money raised that night. Make sure everyone you invite knows about the theme and the goal.

Benefit classes
Ask a local restaurant to sponsor a cooking class and charge a donation at the door.

Ask a yoga teacher, dance teacher, boot camp fitness instructor, etc., to create a benefit class that is at a special time, in a special location and perhaps longer than their normal class. Sometimes people gather a group of teachers to teach an exciting class together.
A-thons
Big athletic events are a great way to piggyback fundraising with your athletic interests. If you’re a runner, cyclist, swimmer, hiker or any type of athlete, you can solicit sponsorship for an upcoming event. Ask friends, family and people you know through work, church and civic groups to donate based on your accomplishments, such as running a marathon, cycling or swimming a certain distance, or hiking a mountain.

Tip-a-thon
Food service workers have held tip-a-thons to collect donations for their GV team. The restaurant and your co-workers might be willing to donate all or a portion of one night’s tips to support your GV trip. Placing a donation jar with a compelling photo and donation information near the cashier’s station or on the bar gives patrons an opportunity to help. Be sure to make cards with information on how people can donate online, and have those available too.

Work-a-thon
Design a work-a-thon! Work-a-thons provide a service, especially to the elderly and those with limited free time. Brainstorm tasks that others would appreciate having done — raking leaves, washing cars, babysitting, taking care of pets, running errands, tailoring clothes, doing laundry, cleaning, trimming, shoveling snow, etc. Ask friends to take on a task or two on your behalf. Ask recipients of the services for a donation and ask others to sponsor you for a day, or per task.

Bowl-a-thon
A bowl-a-thon is a popular way to raise money. Get a local bowling alley to sponsor or partially sponsor the admission price for your guests, charge a higher donation at the door and create a bowling competition with prizes at the end of the night.

Tournaments
Golf tournaments and fishing tournaments are also successful ways to ask for a donation to register and then provide prizes at the end of the event.

Grow a mustache
There are groups of men who get sponsorships to grow their mustaches for a month. Groups have grown mustaches to collect spare change in local schools, for research on prostate cancer, and more.
Selling stuff
(at events and online)

There is a huge list of creative ways to sell products. Some that are successful are included here, but use your creativity and share your successes with us!

Yard sale
Being part of a GV trip is a good excuse to clean out your closets. Have a yard sale. Ask friends and neighbors to donate items, and be sure to advertise that all proceeds will support your Habitat for Humanity Global Village project. If you have kids who want to help out, add a bake sale or lemonade stand. You could even let the buyer decide how much to "donate" for each item. You will be surprised by people's generosity.

Virtual craft show
If you are an artist or make crafts, you could sell handmade items. Host an etsy.com event and tell your friends to go to your etsy store and purchase things where all proceeds will be donated to Global Village.

T-shirt sales
Design a T-shirt. You could create an iron-on design that you put on secondhand T-shirts in good condition (or low-cost new shirts) and sell at your events or online (or give to your donors).

Other products
Find local businesses that will allow you to sell their products for a profit. For example, Café Campesino in Americus, Georgia, offers organic fair-trade coffee that it allows GV participants to use to raise money toward their GV Challenge goals. Go to cafecampesino.com/gvcoffee and click on the Café Campesino fundraising link for details.
Host an auction (silent, live or online)
Ask for contributions of unique items, a stay at a timeshare, handmade crafts, gift cards to local stores, services such as massages and facials, and create an auction. There are several ways to auction your items:

- Live auctions: You can hold a live auction at your workplace over lunch, or during a big fundraising event, party or concert that you are hosting.

- Silent auctions: A silent auction can be held open for as long as you want. For example, you could create a silent auction at your church that is open for bids for a month, or a silent auction that is open only during a party or a concert.

- Online auctions: EBay is a good place to create an online silent auction. Spread the word to your social network via Facebook and email, promoting the start and end dates for the auction, the link to the auction page, and some of the premium items you will be selling. Send an email about one week before to excite people, an email on the day it starts and then another one a day before the auction ends. After the auction, thank all of your purchasers (and people who donated auction items) and tell them how much you were able to raise through their support.
Other creative ideas for spreading the word and raising money

Even though this handbook is full of ideas for raising money, our ultimate goal is to gain supporters for the work and mission of Habitat for Humanity. That means we welcome the opportunity to spread awareness of the issue of global poverty housing, create advocates for our work, and inspire new participants in Global Village and in other aspects of Habitat’s efforts, from bringing new participants in to local affiliates to new shoppers in our ReStores. So as you are fundraising for your trip and your goal, keep in mind the big picture of all the ways people can be engaged in our mission.

These ideas are ways to spread awareness and open the door for people to step into the world of Habitat. Of course, you can use these ideas to raise money, too!

Speaking presentations
Ask anyone and everyone you know if you can make a presentation to their group — churches, civic organizations, clubs, classes, etc. Build your presentation around the Global Village video or your own slideshow or video about your trip. Sometimes this works well after your trip, too! Share your pitch with the group — the reason you are giving your own time and money to this project, and what inspires you about the mission. Collect as many donations on the spot as you can and have cards available with your Share.Habitat fundraising Web page address, and information on how to give via phone or check. As with events, have a sign-in sheet and follow up to thank people.

Community newsletters
Use your company, organization, church or campus newsletter to publicize your Global Village trip. Offer to write a series of articles about Habitat for Humanity, Global Village and your particular trip, possibly one before, during and after. Ask for financial support for your trip in the articles you write, and publicize your Share.Habitat fundraising web page address to encourage people to donate online. Remember — you’ll always get more when you ask.

Local companies, civic organizations and churches
Don’t forget to ask local businesses that you patronize, civic clubs such as Rotary, and local churches. Find ways they can support you, from allowing you to leave a change jar near the cash register at the coffee shop to making an extra offering on a Sunday at church.
Media
Use whatever forms of local media are available while fundraising: newspapers, television and radio stations, and community bulletin boards. If you are hosting a particularly creative event, media might jump at the chance to cover a captivating story about someone reaching out to make a positive difference in the world. When providing information to the media, always mention the local Habitat affiliate, whose mission it is to eliminate poverty housing locally.

Employer matching gifts
More than 1,300 companies match employee gifts to Habitat, and this money could be designated for your Global Village trip. Visit habitat.org/match to find your company’s matching gift guidelines and company contact. Before completing a matching gift form, ask your contact or human resources department if your trip is eligible. If so, ask that your employer clearly indicate the GV event code and trip destination with the matching gift payment. If applying for matching gifts, notify your team leader and Habitat for Humanity International’s GV coordinator so we can make sure your matching gifts are properly allocated to your challenge goal and to your team.

“I do not want to talk about what you understand about this world. I want to know what you will do about it. I do not want to know what you hope. I want to know what you will work for. I do not want your sympathy for the needs of humanity. I want your muscle.”

— Robert Fulghum
After returning from your GV trip

Fundraising and awareness-raising is most helpful before you leave on your trip so the host program will have a sense in advance of how much more capacity they have to build additional homes based on your efforts, but it is also a good idea to consider fundraising efforts after you return.

For people who have never been on a Global Village trip and are not comfortable fundraising without having experienced this transformational program, fundraising after you get home is a great way to carry your inspiration into action. For generations to come, your efforts to fundraise and share your story with others will significantly affect the community you visited.

Many of the suggestions listed in this handbook work just as well after the trip as before.

Instead of saying in your appeal letter or in your pitch, “I’m raising funds for a community in Nepal where I will be building a home in two months,” you would say, “I just returned from building a home in Nepal and got so inspired that I have committed to raising the money needed to build another home.” While you are traveling, be sure to document your experience and be thinking about how you can best share it with others once you get back.

Remember that people will be inspired by your inspiration, so give them ways to get involved. They can donate money to your GV Challenge, learn more about the program and about Habitat, apply to join a future GV team or volunteer with a local Habitat affiliate.

“Spread love everywhere you go: first of all in your own house. Give love to your children, to your wife or husband, to a next door neighbor . . . Let no one ever come to you without leaving better and happier. Be the living expression of God’s kindness; kindness in your face, kindness in your eyes, kindness in your smile, kindness in your warm greeting.”

— Mother Teresa
Thanking your supporters

Supporters who give money via credit card (online or by phone) or via check to Habitat for Humanity International receive an acknowledgement letter that will be their tax receipt. People who donate online will receive an automated message that their donation was received. Donations are non-refundable.

Donors who give space or food for an event, or who pay for something at a yard sale (or who give directly to you and not via check or credit card to Habitat) will not get an acknowledgement letter from Habitat for Humanity International.

Regardless of how people give, we encourage you to follow up personally with your donors. Some great ways to acknowledge and thank your supporters include:

- A handwritten thank-you card after receiving the gift.
- Include the donor on any trip updates you do before, during or after the trip, if they would like to be included.
- Send them a personal email after the trip with a photo from the build and thank them again for their help.
- If your team is using the virtual team opportunity, include them in your virtual team.
- Throw a thank-you party once you get home and share stories, photos and videos from your trip.
- Bring a small gift of appreciation from the trip, such as something personal and handmade or special from the community you visited.

Whatever you do, make sure it is personal, heartfelt and acknowledges them for the profound impact of their gift on a family and on a community.

“If the only prayer you said in your whole life was ‘thank you,’ that would suffice.”

— Meister Eckhart
Strategies for making your one-time supporters into long-time supporters

Almost half of the people who go on a GV trip are repeat team members. They have the opportunity not only to travel and build homes every year with a Global Village team, but also to challenge themselves and their networks to support a Habitat host program in another part of the world. This section is for people who are planning to participate multiple times with Global Village teams.

What if you had 50 people who supported you and donated money to Global Village every time you asked them? What if your donor team actually looked forward to your annual letter asking them for money? Sound impossible? It’s not!

To create a donor base that is excited about your work and that feels good about supporting you and Global Village year after year, these are some of the best practices from our top Global Village leaders:

- Relationships. Go to people who you know very well or with whom you want to build stronger relationships. Take the time to know what they care about, and share why you care about the mission of Habitat for Humanity. The more they know about your passion, the more they will be inspired by it.

- Personalize. No blanket “Dear friend” emails to the people you want to cultivate for the long term. You could segment your list so that after sending one “Dear friend” type of email, you can follow up personally with the people who give and make sure all future communications to them are personal.

- Share. People who give toward your fundraising goal likely want to know about your journey — before, during and after. Keep them in the loop by sending updates about your preparations, things you learn beforehand about the build project, a couple poignant emails or videos from the field, and certainly a report when you get back.

- Account. What did Global Village spend your money on? Once the money is counted and sent to the host program, make sure you find out how that money was spent and report back to your donors so they can see the home, the family, and the community where their investment made a difference. They want to know their money was spent well.

- Update. Send an update email sometime during the year in between your fundraising asks if you learn something new about Habitat, the build project you just did or a build project you will be doing.

Ultimately, if your donors feel the investment they made in Global Village was spent well and the experience was rewarding for them, the likelihood is much higher that they will want to give again.

Habitat for Humanity International will make sure that the money donated is spent well. But we cannot possibly know all of your donors or deliver communications that speak to them personally. Therefore, it is your personal communication with your donors before, during and after your GV projects that will make the experience inspiring and rewarding for them over the short term and long term.
You can create a fundraising Web page for your Global Village trip in just minutes!

Our website, Share.Habitat, will create a customized page for you containing information about Habitat, Global Village, your trip and your destination country. It also includes a donation button for online donations, and instructions on how to mail or phone in a donation. Through this site, you will be able to post a link to Facebook, Twitter, LinkedIn and many more social media sites and use dynamic emailing tools to reach out to potential donors.

Build a better world: Join the GV Challenge!
The GV Challenge is our response to the growing global need for decent, safe and affordable shelter. More than 1.6 billion of the world’s citizens do not have an adequate place to live. Habitat is challenging Global Village volunteers to make an even greater impact on the global issue of poverty housing by raising additional funds above individual program costs to support Habitat’s building projects worldwide. Take up the challenge! Join us in sharing our story, building hope and making an impact on the world!

How to create a Share.Habitat fundraising Web page:

- Step 1: Go to habitat.org/cd/gv/participant/tripshare.aspx

- Step 2: Enter your Global Village event code and your participant ID (given to you in your acceptance letter). Double check the information given on the confirmation page.

- Step 3: Enter your name, email address and password, or connect via your Facebook account. For the richest experience, we suggest you use your Facebook login; however, it is not required.

- Step 4: Enter a personal message about your trip, or use the default we’ve provided. Then, set your fundraising goal (be sure to set your goal at your trip cost plus whatever you think you can raise for the GV Challenge). Click “done”.

- Step 5: You have created your Share.Habitat fundraising page! From here, you can edit any information previously entered, as well as add photos, videos and updates to your page.

- Step 6: Share your page with potential donors: At the upper right of your page, you will see buttons that allow you and visitors to the site to post a message and a link to your page on hundreds of different social media sites.
Click on the Dashboard tab to do even more!
From here you can:

- Send mass emails to contacts from your email provider.
- Send requests to any current donors to help spread the word.
- Find code and instructions to create a donation button on an outside website.

On the Dashboard, you will also find a link to our instructional document that can walk you step by step through the creation, editing and sharing functions of the site. This document contains a useful FAQ section that can answer most of your questions. Here you will also find tips and suggestions for effective fundraising.

Traditional

Dear __________,

How are you? I saw on Facebook that you recently welcomed a baby girl into your family. Congratulations!

I’m writing today because I am seeking support for a cause I care deeply about. As you know, I’ve been volunteering on and off with Habitat for Humanity’s local program in Minneapolis for the past couple years. I have experienced first-hand how building a safe, affordable and decent home for a family not only changes that family’s living conditions but changes their lives. When children grow up with the security of having a roof over their heads, miraculous things can happen. Kids who never would have even graduated from high school suddenly have the solid foundation that allows them to go to college. Communities that were unsafe for decades are rebuilt by families living in clean, decent homes, and entire communities start to transform.

Recently, I had the honor of being chosen for a Habitat Global Village team where I will travel in September with 12 others to Nepal. Nearly 90 percent of Nepal’s population who live in the country’s plains and mountain regions work primarily as subsistence farmers. One of the families we will work with lives in a small, one-room house made with a mud floor and a thatched-grass roof. The roof leaks often during Nepal’s rainy season, and the house is not strong enough to withstand heavy wind.

Habitat Nepal’s goal is to help more families like the Rajbanshis create safe, healthy homes. And it’s doing so through an initiative called Save & Build. Families can join together to pool their savings and resources. Then, thanks to volunteers and donors, Habitat Nepal can match what each Save & Build group raises. This hastens construction, because families can build in stages as funds are raised.

Habitat works with these partner families to ensure cost-effective, eco-friendly construction. In eastern Nepal, for instance, Habitat has trained partner families in bamboo cultivation and how to use bamboo technology in house building. And partner families dedicate at least 400 sweat-equity hours building their own houses — and houses for other families in their savings group! It is truly an honor to be able to help this family and their future.

Today I’m asking that you consider supporting me and my team as we embark on this journey. It costs only $2,000 to complete a new Habitat house in Nepal. Each house includes two rooms, plus a sitting room, kitchen and bathroom. Our team hopes to raise $10,000 to build five new homes in Nepal.

Please consider giving as generously as you can. You can give online at my personal fundraising Web page share.habitat.org/gv/dansmith or send a check to me, made out to Habitat for Humanity International. I will bundle all the checks I receive and send them together on Aug. 1.

Thank you in advance for your support. Please feel free to call me with any questions.
Sincerely,

Dan Smith

Reminder email

Hello Ian,
Last month I emailed you about my upcoming Habitat for Humanity Global Village build trip.

I am working hard to raise $2,000 to build a decent, safe and affordable home in Nepal and am almost there! I have raised $1,256.50 and am committed to hitting my goal in the next three weeks.

If you are thinking about supporting this effort, now is the time. Any amount makes a difference. I’m trying to raise the additional funds within the next 21 days (by Aug. 5.). Please visit my Web page at share.habitat.org/gv/dansmith to donate via credit card. If you’d like to give via check or phone, let me know and I can send you those details. Thanks so much for your support!

Creative/funny appeal letter

A totally different approach to soliciting financial support is a quiz. Found to be most effective when sent to friends and family, the front page is a series of multiple-choice questions — including correct answers — that give the quiz-taker an idea of what is happening and piques their interest to learn more. The reverse side of the quiz provides the details of the upcoming GV trip and appeals for financial support. A more heartfelt solicitation letter (and photos) can go on the back.

A QUIZ
Dear friends and family,
Please take the following quiz to learn what is happening with me this summer.

1. This summer I will:
   a. Quit my job and sell suntan lotion in Hawaii.
   b. Go to __________ on a Habitat for Humanity Global Village building trip.
   c. Get married.
   d. Do nothing.
Answer: b (Why didn't any of you pick c?!)
2. While in (country), I will:
   a. Work as a taxi driver.
   b. Study at a local university.
   c. Work with a local Habitat for Humanity program to eliminate poverty housing.
   d. Build homes with families in need of a simple, decent place to live.
   e. c and d.
Answer: e. I will be part of a X-member team working on a building project in (country or state).

3. In (country) it costs just $___________ to build a safe, affordable and decent home for a family in need.
   a. $2,500
   b. $____________
   c. $10,000
Answer: b

4. Would you consider:
   a. Helping me do my laundry before I go?
   b. Joining me as a prayer partner and as an advocate against poverty housing?
   c. Joining me as a financial partner?
   d. Calling my mother and tell her it is OK for me to fly on an airplane?
   e. All of the above.
Answer: e. But especially b and c. Please prayerfully consider if God would have you be a part of this ministry.

5. I am trying to raise enough money to build an additional home. If you give the following amount of money, it would really help!
   a. $10
   b. $100
   c. $1,000
   d. $2,500
   e. $10,000
   f. All of the above.
Answer: f. Any amount makes a huge difference to a family that needs a home!

6. To make a financial contribution:
   a. Go to my personal website at share.habitat.org/gv/sarahhill to donate via credit card.
   b. Make checks payable to Habitat for Humanity International and mail back to me in the envelope provided.
   c. Make a credit card gift via phone at 800-422-4828, ext.7530.
   d. Give no later than May 15 for your donation to count toward my goal.
   e. All of the above.
Answer: e

   Thank you for taking this quiz and for supporting my team!
   I look forward to sharing the results of my experience with you when I return. See the reverse side for more details.

Sincerely,

(your name)

Tax deductions for donations

Any donations raised over and above the cost of the program are considered fully tax deductible for donors in the United States as long as their donation is in support of Habitat for Humanity International and the Global Village team, and is not allocated to pay for a person’s expenses or program costs. However, we always recommend that donors consult a tax adviser if they have questions about their tax situation.

For U.S. citizens who participate, the entire amount might be tax deductible as an out-of-pocket expense in the pursuit of charitable work. When participants pay the program cost from their own funds and itemize year-end taxes, if there was no significant element of pleasure in the trip, the entire cost of the program can be deducted. Consult with your tax adviser for more information.

Global Village Challenge FAQ

Doubling our impact!
Habitat for Humanity International is challenging Global Village volunteers to make an even greater effect on the global issue of poverty housing. With the help of our dedicated participants and leaders, we are hoping to build twice as many homes.

What is the Global Village Challenge?
The GV Challenge is our effort to expand our work and build twice as many houses than before. We challenge all Global Village teams to raise the funds needed for at least one additional home (or more, depending upon the cost of the home in the region). Previous teams that have undertaken the challenge have together raised $10,000 to $35,000. We provide several ways — online and otherwise — to help participants raise funds and awareness for our mission.

Why is Habitat adding this challenge to the Global Village program?
The world is experiencing a global housing crisis. About 1.6 billion people live in substandard housing, and 100 million people are homeless, according to the United Nations. These people are increasingly urban residents, and every week more than a million people are born in, or move to, cities in the developing world. Today, 1 billion people — 32 percent of the global urban population — live in urban slums. If no serious action is taken, the number of slum-dwellers worldwide will increase over the next 30 years to nearly 2 billion, according to the U.N.

As a Christian ministry and worldwide leader in eradicating poverty housing, responding to this global need is a matter of conscience and action. Global Village is a cornerstone program in Habitat for Humanity International’s network. Our participants and trip leaders are some of the highest caliber, inspiring ambassadors for this mission. We believe that, because of the growing need in the world, Global Village can easily double its efforts and serve twice as many families and communities than in the past. We have 1.6 billion people counting on us to do this!

I am uncomfortable asking people for money. Do I have to do it?
No one is required to fundraise.

But we urge all Global Village participants to take on the GV Challenge because we know that as leaders in eradicating global poverty housing, we can do more.

For people who are uncomfortable asking for money, we recommend two strategies:
• Use our new online fundraising tool at Share.Habitat, which allows you to write a simple appeal letter and send it to your social network.
• Consider a benefit event, such as a yard sale, where you can sell things you are trying to get rid of anyway, and let people know the proceeds will go toward your GV Challenge goal. You will be surprised how many people will be happy to know their purchase is going to a good cause, and many might ask you about your trip! See page 19, Event-based fundraising, for details on this strategy. Amaze yourself!

Don’t GV participants already make a donation to the national organization in their host country?
Global Village program costs include a donation of $400 to $500 per person to the national organization, plus a donation to cover some of the costs of managing your participation in Global Village. These are considered donations, but they are the actual costs of the staff that supports you, your team leader and your build project, as well as the costs of the materials for construction. The additional money raised will expand the national organization’s ability to build more homes and take on more community improvement projects, and will also allow Global Village to engage more volunteers and improve our services to participants and leaders.

How can Habitat help me raise money?
Habitat helps you in these ways:
• Our new web platform, Share.Habitat. Share.Habitat allows you to set up your own fundraising Web page with the ability to add photos, videos, stories and a personal appeal letter. With the click of a button, you can share your appeal letter with your email list and with all of your social networks, such as LinkedIn, Facebook and hundreds more.

• Fundraising training calls. We offer a series of calls led and facilitated by Global Village senior staff and team leaders who are skilled in a variety of fundraising strategies. These hour-long calls are a great way to gain more skills and get feedback on your ideas, coaching on your fundraising challenges and inspiration that will keep you going. Participants are welcome to join or listen to recordings of as many of these calls as they choose. Topics include using events to raise funds and awareness, who to ask and for how much, and deciding on the best strategy for you.

• Your team leader. Many of our team leaders have experience and skill in fundraising and are happy to support their teams in their fundraising efforts. Ask your team leader what additional support your team is using, such as calls before the trip to hear about the host program, virtual teams and more.

Can I use the funds I raise to cover my program costs?
Yes, you can use some of the funds you raise to cover the program cost for you to participate. Many GV team members pay the program cost and airfare using their own resources, then raise money for a team or personal goal.

Can I use the funds I raise to pay for my airfare?
Transportation from your point of departure to your GV host country is not included in the published program cost and is your responsibility to schedule and to pay for. Funds raised that exceed the cost of your trip cannot be used to cover any part of a GV participant’s airfare.
How will the extra money raised be spent?
All funds raised over and above the cost of your cost will be used directly for the Global Village program. The majority of the funds will go to the host program, which will use it to build more homes and strengthen its in-country efforts. A small portion will go toward enhancing programs within Global Village, such as additional training of leaders, improved customer service and better web tools and resources.

How much should I set as my fundraising goal?
We recommend you set a goal that feels like a stretch but is do-able. For some people, this is $250 above the cost of their trip. For others, it is $25,000 or more. Every dollar makes a huge difference in the countries in which we build. And every person you touch through your fundraising efforts learns about the importance of our mission.

First, we recommend that you read pages 4 through 10 of this fundraising handbook and think about a goal that feels right for you.

Things to consider in setting your goal:

- How much does a house cost in the region you will visit? How much of a house do you want to sponsor through your fundraising efforts? (A door? A wall? An entire house? Ten houses?)

- Who is in your network? Think creatively and expansively about the people you know — your family, friends, neighbors and local businesses. Roughly how many people will you ask, and for how much?

- What skills and resources can you tap? Can you have a yard sale, host a car wash, a dinner party, etc.?

Most of all, be willing to amaze yourself!

I have no idea how to raise money. How do I start?
Read our fundraising handbook to get started. Join or listen to a recording of a fundraising training call with key staff and leaders in the Global Village program.

But the best way to start is to start with the idea that is most exciting and easiest. Have faith that you will build from there. As the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. said, "Faith is taking the first step even when you don’t see the whole staircase."

Habitat for Humanity: Eliminating poverty housing and homelessness

Who We Are

Habitat for Humanity International is a global nonprofit Christian housing organization that seeks to put God’s love into action by bringing people together to build homes, communities and hope. Since 1976, Habitat has served more than 500,000 families by welcoming people of all races, religions and nationalities to construct, rehabilitate or preserve homes; by advocating for fair and just housing policies; and by providing training and access to resources to help families improve their shelter conditions. For more information, to donate or to volunteer, please visit habitat.org, follow us at facebook.com/habitat or at twitter.com/habitat_org, or join Habitat’s blog community at habitat.org/blog.

Why Our Work Matters

The world is experiencing a global housing crisis. About 1.6 billion people live in substandard housing and 100 million are homeless, according to the United Nations. These people are increasingly urban residents, and every week more than one million people are born in or move to cities in the developing world.

Today, 1 billion people — 32 percent of the global urban population — live in urban slums. If no serious action is taken, the number of slum dwellers worldwide will increase over the next 30 years to nearly 2 billion, according to the U.N.

People live in inadequate housing throughout the world, and Habitat for Humanity is dedicated to providing decent, affordable homes for those in need.

In the United States alone, 95 million people have housing problems. These problems include payments that are too large of a percentage of their income, overcrowding, poor quality, and homelessness.

Building homes does more than put a roof over someone’s head. In clean, decent, stable housing:

- Families can provide stability for their children.
- A family’s sense of dignity and pride grow.
- Health, physical safety and security improve.
- Education and job prospects increase.
More than 500,000 families — more than 2.5 million people — are sleeping in safer, healthier and more secure homes thanks to the efforts of Habitat for Humanity and its partners and supporters. Each year, Habitat for Humanity builds homes, communities and hope by constructing and improving homes, by advocating for fair and just housing policies, and by providing training and access to resources to help families improve their shelter conditions.

How Do We Work?

Through volunteer labor and donations of money and materials, Habitat builds and rehabilitates simple, decent houses alongside our homeowner (partner) families. Every year, hundreds of thousands of Habitat for Humanity volunteers contribute their time, skills and support to build homes, communities and hope around the world.

Habitat’s basic home building and finance model

- Habitat builds and rehabilitates houses alongside homeowner families.
- Uses volunteer labor.
- Accepts donations of money and materials.
- Homeowner families invest a down payment, monthly mortgage payments and hundreds of hours of their own labor.

Habitat’s home building and finance model in developing world economies

- New and innovative housing finance programs are designed through Habitat’s partnerships with microfinance institutions.
- Effective and suitable for families of very low income.
- Applied where appropriate.
- Example: Save and Build. Group savings are matched by Habitat funds to build houses for group members.
- Example: Building in Stages. Houses are built progressively with small loans that must be paid before the next stage of the house is built.
